ASK ANNEXATION

REMINGTON DISTRICT PETITIONS BOARD—TRUSTEES IN USUAL ROUTINE

The regular weekly meeting of the trustees of the city of Glendale was held in the city hall Monday evening, Sept. 13. There were present O. A. Lane, president of the board, and Trustees Charles Grist, J. S. Thompson, A. W. Tower and George Williams. Also present T. W. Watson, city manager; J. C. Sherer, city clerk; H. B. Lynch, manager public service department; W. S. Althouse, assistant city engineer; George H. Herald, city marshal; A. H. Lankford, fire marshal. City Attorney W. E. Evans is absent on a vacation, as is also Edward M. Lynch, city engineer.

Peter L. Ferry, contractor, was present, and in a communication to the board asked for sixty days' additional time to complete the improvements on Canada boulevard. Mr. Ferry says that he has been delayed on account of removing railroad tracks on the boulevard he is improving. The extension of time was granted.

On motion the bids for the improvement of Second street were opened and read. They are as follows:

Peter L. Ferry:
Grading, per linear foot, 25c.
Oiling, macadamizing, 4⅜c.
Curb, 23c.
Sidewalks, per square foot, 10c.

E. Schelling:
Grading, per linear foot, 18c.
Oiling and macadamizing, 4½c.
Curb, 26c.
Sidewalk, per square foot, 9c.

F. R. Sinclair:
Oiling and macadamizing, 4.8c.
Curb, 23c.
Sidewalk, per square foot, 9c.

On motion the bids as submitted were referred to the city engineer.

The chair announced that the time had arrived for taking up the hearing of A. Berger as arranged for at the preceding meeting of the board. Upon request the clerk read a lengthy protest from the chief of police setting forth reasons why said Berger should appear before the board and give reasons why his permit to operate an automobile service should not be revoked. At the conclusion of the reading of the objections to Berger continuing to operate an auto service, Mr. Berger appeared before the board and quite successfully explained just why all the accidents referred to in the complaint read, occurred. At the conclusion of his remarks the chairman of the board stated that it would appear from all the evidence that someone using the car had been careless, but as Mr. Berger promised to hereafter keep the car strictly under his own supervision he was granted the privilege of continuing in the auto bus service.

The city manager informed the board that he had in his possession a petition from the citizens northwest of Glendale, in what is known as the Remington street district, asking that the territory in which they reside be annexed to the city of Glendale. On motion the petition, which was signed by Isaac C. Rice and thirty-five other residents of that locality, was read. In explanation, the city manager said that the proposed annexation district contains sixty-one voters and that he had been informed that the majority of them favored the annexation of this territory. On motion, the petition as read was received and placed on file.

A further motion made the request that the resolution calling for an election be read. Said resolution was read, the same fixing the date of the election Saturday, October 16, and the name of the district, Remington street annexation district. The place of the election,
The judges are Sara J. Wright, J. E. Howes and Mrs. J. Sampson. The resolution was adopted as read and ordered published in the Burbank Review for five insertions.

A resolution ordering the cleaning of lots from weeds in certain districts in Glendale was adopted. The city manager stated to the board that owners of more than 2000 lots had been already notified to clean the weeds from their lots.

An ordinance providing for the opening and widening of Eighth street east of Adams street was taken up for first and second reading and laid over to a future meeting for third and final reading.

City Manager T. W. Watson presented a map locating the proposed new voting precincts in the city of Glendale. The same is to be submitted to the board of supervisors for its adoption or rejection. According to the new scheme there are to be fif-

PRISCILLA CLUB DEAD

The Priscilla club is out of existence. When the club came to the close of its last session and the beginning of the vacation it was determined not to revive it again. The reason for this sudden demise of an interesting and useful society was that a considerable proportion of its members worked in Los Angeles, and by virtue of the civil service law that insists that members of the civil service must reside within the city bounds they were forced to go to reside in Los Angeles. The few remaining members did not think it practicable to attempt to continue the club.

In a serious scholarly psychological analysis of Charlie Chaplin, an English writer brands "Charles of the Movies" a "highly emotional actor; not a clown, but an artist; not a comedian but a genius."

(Special Service to Glendale Evening News)

BROWNSVILLE, Texas, Sept. 14.—Five hundred Mexicans crossed the Rio Grande last night, and scattered throughout the country with which they are evidently familiar. The American troops and the Texas rangers to the number of 2500 immediately started to corral them. The hunt is still going on and it is hoped to round up the invaders before many hours. American troops are intrenching opposite Matamoras in anticipation of an attack from that quarter.

In the sweep of the advance today 5200 Russians were caught and compelled to surrender.

WHERE TROUT ABOUND

P. F. RENFROW TELLS OF A CHARMING CREEK IN TEHAMA COUNTY

Perched up among the high Sierras, nestling sweetly between the lofty wooded ranges of Tehama county, close to the snow line, at an elevation of about 7500 feet, lies the south fork of Cottonwood creek, a beautifully clear stream that has four forks, which gradually come together into the creek proper and thence flow down to join the Sacramento. To this secluded and attractive spot went Mr. P. F. Renfrow and Mrs. Renfrow for their summer vacation. Mr. Renfrow's arduous labors in his barber shop, 409 South Brand boulevard, made the trip doubly valuable to him and the benefit both he and Mrs. Renfrow obtained from the pure air, the health-giving water and outdoor life of the hills will not easily pass away.

"There were eight in our party," said Mr. Renfrow. "We made the trip, which is a journey of two and a half days, by automobile, taking along with us our material for camping and making camp at whatever part of the road we found ourselves when night fell; breakfasting in whatever good town we found ourselves near, and getting the rest of our meals in similar fashion. Nothing could have been more fortunate than our trip as far as road experiences were concerned. We had no trouble all the way, with the single exception of a solitary puncture on the way back, near Elizabeth lake.

"The road from Delano to Tulare was very bad; the road through the Tejon pass was worse. The state is constructing its highway through the pass at present and the roadbed is all torn up. We found the road on the west side from Woodland to Willows very poor, but if we had taken the east side road by Marysville and Chico, we would have found fine going. Indeed, all through that section the roads are good.

"Arrived at Redbluff, the county seat of Tehama county, we had still nearly 60 miles to go to our destination. This was accomplished by getting as close to our camping quarters as we could in the autos, and then portaging our food and material up the mountain to the camp.

"Nothing could equal the peace and quiet of the camp at which our party spent one of the most delightful months it has ever been my pleasure to enjoy. "Bowman's" is the name of the camp. It stands on the steep hillside, looking down toward where the south fork of Cottonwood creek flows below, with the aroma of the forest about it and the snow line visible on the Sierras about as far distant as the mountains are from Glendale. Cottonwood creek cuts the divide in two and descends between the two divisions of that divide to between 1500 and 2000 feet.

"Only in spots is one able to get to the creek; but once there, it is possible to fish all along its sides. The waters, deliciously cool and clear and ideal for trout, afford great sport. We fished chiefly with fly, using the common varieties and finding the trout not too particular. The flies used were small. We found that a very effective fly was the common brown hackle. When we wanted to catch some big fellow we tempted his appetite with a big grasshopper, and very seldom failed to land him.

"The hills abound in deer and game and it is no difficult task to keep the table supplied with the food of the season. I don't think one of our party did not regret to leave when the time came for us to return home. I felt myself greatly benefited in health by my sojourn among the hills and Mrs. Renfrow experienced a very great improvement in her health.

"That is a part of the state that has very few visitors, and very few outsiders seem to know what is going on there. Just below Durham there is a stretch of 25 miles of rice fields. The country there is suitable for the growing of that crop and it seems to flourish there. From Durham to Red Bluff the country is wheat land and produces large wheat crops. The poorest yield there this year was six sacks to the acre; but most of the yield was far above the average. The country is prosperous and the people kindly. Altogether we spent a most ideal vacation in the bosom of the hill country."

The walnut crop is pretty much made, and Manager C. Thorp of the California Walnut Growers' association says it is the biggest ever raised. He estimates it at 13,000 tons, which is an increase of 40 per cent over last year's. Of this, 98 per cent will be in Southern California. Quality good. A greater per cent of No. 2 than usual is promised.

U. S. EMBASSY WORK

AMERICAN AMBASSADOR IN LONDON REPRESENTS FOUR COUNTRIES

Walter Hines Page, the American ambassador in London, is one of the busiest men in the world. His office represents four countries—America, Germany, Austria and Turkey. It has a dozen extra secretaries and a corps of accountants and clerks.

In addition to being in constant closest touch with the State department at Washington, the American embassy in London is also in daily communication with the embassies at Berlin, Vienna, Constantinople, Rome and Petrograd, which causes the costly interchange of telegraphic correspondence, at least ten times the volume of peace times. Occasionally telegrams cost the government $1000 each.

An amusing episode was the outcome of a series of such telegraphic interchanges with the American embassy in Constantinople, it has just been learned. Ambassador Morgenthau reported to London that the Turks had imprisoned many British citizens whom they were holding for ransom, the sum of $2000 being required in each case. The American embassy in London immediately communicated its information to the British government and word was sent back to Morgenthau to that effect. The next message from Morgenthau was that he had convinced the Turks that $200 was a far more reasonable figure than $2000, and the Turks had agreed. In turn, this fact was immediately communicated to the British government and the ransom was paid, though indirectly, for ransom is a word of which the British government takes no cognizance.

However, hard work is but a part of the troubles of No. 4 Grosvenor square. The greatest are passports. The document bearing the great seal of the State department which guarantees safe conduct for American travelers in Europe is now the most rigidly drawn of any nation, but before the war was the loosest. Efficient clerks delegated to handle the passport department at the embassy have become nervous wrecks and new "hands" are constantly necessary. The passport clerk begins by interrogating the applicant as to his antecedents and must almost require proof that the applicant at some time or other had been born. After the first round of questions the liberty-loving American begins to get mad. Before he has been wormed out of his entire life's history he or she, as the case may be, is thoroughly mad, and he or she leaves the embassy heaping coals of fire on the heads of the men who are delegated to administer the affairs of America in a foreign clime.

Time cools anger, however, and invariably the applicant is back within a day or two to ask some favor of the ambassador. Nine times out of ten these favors cannot be granted because of strict rules that regulate American embassies. A favorite request is that valuables be put in the "embassy safe." One woman brought a string of pearls which she insisted should be "put away" for her until she returned. Some want mail sent to America in the embassy post-bag, while others would hold prolonged chats with the ambassador relating to family or business affairs. All of these matters are impossible.

Irrespective of the smaller trifles, it has been learned that the administration of affairs by Ambassador Page for the governments of Germany, Austria and Turkey has evoked highest praise from these governments, who have indicated the hope that the day will come when appreciation may be expressed in a more free and easy manner.

In the meantime Ambassador Page and his war-time staff are hard at work and will continue on until peace shines brightly over Europe's war-darkened horizon.

RUSSIA'S LATEST ENIGMA

It is certain that the whole world is speculating as to what may be the meaning of the czar's removal of the Grand Duke Nicholas from the active management of the Russian armies, which he has been slowly extricating from the deadly grip of the kaiser's troops. There are, naturally, a dozen different explanations offered. One is that Germans intrigued to bring about the downfall of the Grand Duke, which is possible but not probable, as apparently the Germans were doing well enough in their campaign against the Russian leader.

Other stories state that Nicholas has been losing all self control since it became manifest that his armies were to be severely tested. It is said that he rushes from one extreme to another; summons exalted officials into his presence and upbraids them with having betrayed his country and destroyed his armies. He dismissed Maklakoff, minister of the interior, say these stories, in a fit of ungovernable anger, accusing him of undermining the loyalty of the Russians by socialistic reforms.

Stories, like these, of course, have to be accepted with very great caution. This war seems to have produced a most extraordinary development of the ordinary campaign liar. It is impossible to credit even one third of the tales that fly about in the clouds of this great war like birds of evil omen. The campaign prevaricator and falsifier seems to be outdoing all his past performances.

It is almost impossible to get at the truth of what is happening in Russia. The Czar is doubtless actuated by a strong desire to save his country from the clutch of the Germans, who maintain a healthy company of spies in the very bosom of his court. Germany, naturally is anxious to sow the seeds of dissatisfaction in the minds of the Russians against their allies and the ingenuity with which they manufacture their stories is amazing.

Nicholas is surrounded by a band of intriguers. They are for the most part allied in some manner with the German court and have little care what might happen to Russia.. At the head of the cabinet is Prince Goremykin who is a fat, old gentleman who spends the greater part of his time sleeping and permits his assistants to affix his official seal to documents of the gravest significance. He is a convenient tool for the intriguers.

Just the other day it was cabled all over the world that the cabinet had been dismissed. How the story got out is unknown. It is the desire of the douma to have the cabinet of incompetents ousted; but apparently they reckoned without their host for the story was as widely contradicted a few hours after its publication in every newspaper in the United States.

It should always be remembered that all Russian news comes by way of Germany just at present and that a great deal is added to it there. Whatever is happening in Russia; whatever induced the Czar to send the commander-in-chief of his armies to the Caucasus is as much a matter of mystery at the present moment to his allies, the French and British as it is to the United States. It must be something serious, however, that has induced the change and for the moment there has not been noticed any material benefit in consequence.

SOME BENEFITS OF THE WAR

It is characteristic of a great war that those who are engaged in it are not capable of seeing what is happening. Even on the battlefield, itself, that is true. The man in the trenches has very little idea of what is going on along the great fighting line of several hundred miles. In like manner, the nations, blinded by grief, by passion, by poverty and hunger, see nothing of the mighty evolution that is taking place throughout the world in consequence of this internecine slaughter.

Even on the United States the war is producing a profound effect. The sudden and awful reality of those slaughtered millions practically at the doors of this land, the very reek of the battlefield that now and then wafts over the Atlantic in sinister puffs, has awakened the people of the United States to the possibilities of the situation and bidden them pause and think and act.

In like manner, the people of Great Britain and her dominions over the sea are thinking seriously just now of the problems that the war has created. The old country is overstocked with a population that has congested in the cities. Long ago the landlords and proprietors of Great Britain and Ireland drove the people out of the countryside and destroyed the peasantry from whose ranks was drawn the bold and hardy soldiery that fought in the Napoleonic wars. The country no longer supports that hardy population. The best of the Scotch highlanders were evicted from their little holdings in the straths and glens of the North and driven to seek a living in the wheatfields of Canada where many of them have made fortunes and where they have again raised up a population strong and hardy, many of whom are now fighting the battles of the old world.

Now comes up the question of land settlement in the British dominions. It is recognized that something must be done to recreate the old peasantry that so often proved the salvation of the country. Certainly wealth has accumulated and men have decayed in Britain. How far the dry rot has gone is not very manifest; but that there is something wrong with people who will haggle over trade questions when the enemy is hammering at their door with aerial bombs is not difficult to determine.

From all sides comes the evidence that there is an awakening on this point, however. The Royal Colonial Institute has appointed a committee to deal with after-war empire settlement and rural development. This committee is laboring hard to devise means to combat the inevitable distress that cannot fail to come as a result of the war. Experience has taught the world that after any great war there comes a time of unimagined hardship. Only by taking a very wide view of the needs and necessities of the empire as a whole and by thinking in world-wide terms of that problem will the people of the British empire be able to save the heritage of which they are so proud.

CIVIC INTEREST

It is the duty of every resident of every city to take an interest in civic affairs. Especially should voters be interested in all things that pertain to the city in which they live. Misinformed and uninformed men and women are dangerous people with the ballot in their hands. Intelligent citizens cannot be easily misinformed.

All acts of the city and school officials should be open to investigation by the public, and when investigation is made, it should be made in a spirit to gain the truth. There is no end to the trouble that arises in communities where the people do not co-operate. There is a lack of common sense business co-operation.

PRACTICAL SCHOOL WORK

The schools have opened for the coming year and the boys and girls are again engaged in making an important investment. The extent of this investment depends upon the intensity and the form of work performed. School work so far as possible should be along practical lines,—lines that prepare boys and girls for good citizenship and fit them to fill positions in the business and social world.

TIME HANGS HEAVY

Upon whom does time hang heavy? On the man who has nothing to do. The busy man takes no heed of time; the work at which he is engaged takes his attention and the days fly rapidly by.

The boy or girl who can add a column of figures rapidly and accurately is in possession of an ability not characteristic of the average person.

Tomorrow and the next day are not of so much importance as today. "Take care of the present and the future will take care of itself."

The time honored custom of having few words to say in the presence of strangers is worth observing.

The world is a vast flower garden when viewed by an optomist.

SAN DIEGO EXPOSITION GETTING READY FOR BIG BUSINESS

The attendance at the San Diego Exposition having almost doubled during the last few weeks, the management is preparing to increase its attractiveness as the summer resorts of the East close up. New features have been secured for the "Isthmus" and it is hoped that the tide of Eastern visitors will not ebb before the close of the year.

SURPRISE PARTY

While Dr. J. T. Morgan and Mrs. Morgan, formerly Mrs. Annie E. Phelon, of 1219 Viola street, Casa Verdugo, were flattering themselves that they had successfully eluded the eagle eyes of their friends and got married safely without the matter becoming known, their friends were preparing to surprise them. A large party of the immediate acquaintances of the bride and bridegroom from Los Angeles had elsewhere surprised the newly married couple in their Casa Verdugo home, getting out notices of the marriage. Needless to say that work was stopped at once and rejoicings and congratulations were exchanged. The evening was then spent with music and other amusements.

ASSISTANT TO MISS DALE

Miss Ruby Dale has announced the opening of her studio for the season and the engagement of Pearl Stark-Grabill as assistant. Mrs. Grabill had studied at the Oberlin Conservatory before coming to California and holds a special high school certificate to teach music in this state. In addition to her work in piano and science of teaching with Miss Dale, she has recently completed Miss Alchin's course in harmony and the course in music at the State Normal. Miss Dale says of her: "I do not know of anyone anywhere better fitted to fill the post of assistant in my work. Since beginning study with me Mrs. Grabill has not only made unusual progress as a pianist, but her grasp of the principles which underlie the more difficult art of teaching, as well as the actual teaching she has done under my supervision, prove to my satisfaction her ability and worth in the pedagogical field. Furthermore, she brings to her work a spirit so full of earnest inquiry and honest investigation that personality is forgotten. Such a spirit, I hold, is the only possible basis for co-operation if the best interests of the pupils are to be kept always in the foreground."

PLAN FOR PEACE ARMY

JOHN A. LAPP SAYS COMBINE VOCATIONAL EDUCATION AND NATIONAL DEFENSE

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 14.—This nation is in a perilous position because of the European war; we must prepare for effective defense; but a standing army of adequate proportions is un-American. After summing up the situation thus, John A. Lapp, in a statement issued today, suggested the application of vocational education to the army and the navy as the solution.

Lapp, as a member of President Wilson's commission on vocational education, drew up the bill that will be presented to congress. He is the author of Indiana's vocational law, which has been a model for other states.

Vocational education and national defense should go hand in hand, said Lapp. In that way only, he said, can the nation maintain an adequate standing army without tremendous waste of human energy and without providing a menace to our democratic ideals.

"We want men trained for war but whose thoughts are of peace," said Lapp. "Why not couple up the two and while making men efficient for defensive war, make them also efficient productive workers? Let us have a million men in training all the time for effective defense, but let that million men be trained all the time for useful employment. Let every camp and battleship become a school where a few hours a day can be spent in preparing for the arts of peace."

Lapp said the army and navy offered opportunities for vocational training in hundreds of different lines to meet the needs of the army and navy. There is no reason, he said, why the army and navy should not do a large part of the work needed for their support.

"Around every army post the government should own large tracts of land for cultivation, where the sciences of agriculture, forestry and animal husbandry in all their phases would be taught and from which the troops could be supported," said Lapp.

Lapp suggested that arrangements could be made to give the carpenter, plumber or machinist who joins the army supplementary education along these lines, so that he would become a better carpenter, plumber or machinist.

To get the broadest benefits from such a scheme, different periods of enlistment would be necessary, he said. Enlistments for from four years down to six months could be allowed, and vocational training in lines requiring greater or less training could be provided as the case might be.

Lapp declared that the six months' enlistment term would be an effective cure for unemployment, because it would offer both a job and schooling.

"Undoubtedly this nation is in a perilous position," said the educator. "We are the only world power not engaged in conflict. As a great neutral we have become the object of envy and hate by all the warring countries, and this will increase as we wax fatter from world trade at the expense of our old-time rivals."

Lapp called attention to the fear this nation always has had for large bodies of men with training for war, and said he believed the scheme outlined would give no ground for such fear.

COUNT POLNA DECLARES HE LOST PAPERS IN SAN FRANCISCO EARTHQUAKE

In an effort to prove the French government seized an American vessel when it commandeered his yacht, the Polna, in the harbor at Marseilles, Count Rudolph Festetis de Polna, a Hungarian nobleman, has taken initial steps toward having his naturalization papers restored in San Francisco.

Count Polna claims he was granted naturalization papers in San Francisco on April 6, 1906, and that they were destroyed in the fire of April 18, 1906. One of the count's witnesses was the late Col. J. C. Kirkpatrick, proprietor of the St. Francis hotel.

United States Deputy Attorney Jorder has cabled to the American consul-general at London asking him to get a deposition from Mrs. Winifred A. Stone, who, the count declares, saw his naturalization papers.

In 1913 the count bought the yacht Thistle from Robert E. Todd of New York for $200,000 and changed her name to the Polna. With Countess Polna, who was Alice Wetherbee, daughter of Gardner Wetherbee, a New York banker, the count went cruising in the Mediterranean.

Last September the Polna went to Marseilles, France. The yacht was seized by the French government. According to the count's attorneys, he admits it was flying the Hungarian flag, but maintains the boat was an American vessel. Under the American law a foreigner cannot own a boat under American registry.

WATERMELON SYRUP

A new use for surplus watermelons has been found by specialists in the United States department of agriculture. With the aid of utensils found in every household a syrup can be easily extracted from the fruit and preserved in sterilized jars. This product will serve most of the purposes for which ordinary syrup is used in the home. It is reddish brown in color, very sweet and well flavored. It has been found especially satisfactory in the making of ginger cake, home-made candy and in sweetening and flavoring ice cream. The method recommended by the department of agriculture for the home manufacturer of this product is as follows:

Remove the pink flesh and seeds from the rind of sweet, fully ripe melons. Crush the flesh with a potato masher or by running it through a meat chopper. Place the crushed pulp and seeds in cloth bag and squeeze out the juice, which flows out readily. About five-sixths of the pulp will squeeze out as juice. About 13 gallons of the juice will make one gallon of syrup. This amount of juice can ordinarily be secured from 10 watermelons weighing from 22 to 25 pounds each.

The juice is then boiled down into a syrup in an ordinary preserving kettle. The juice boils without much foaming until it begins to thicken, when the fire should be slackened to prevent foaming and burning. The red coloring matter in the juice coagulates during boiling and part of it rises to the surface, where it can be removed by skimming. The remainder floats about in the juice, forming red particles which gather near the top. Toward the last of the boiling the syrup must be watched constantly. If the housewife has a candy thermometer she should take the syrup from the fire as soon as it reaches a temperature of 220 degrees Farenheit, otherwise she should let it cook until a small sample on cooling is about as thick as maple syrup.

When the boiling has finished, the syrup can be set aside to cool in covered vessels or can be poured hot into cans or glass containers and sealed.

Where a cider press is available the melons can be cut into pieces and arranged on the press so that the pressure will extract the juice of the pulp before it presses the rind. The juice of the rind is not so rich in sugar, and experiments with rind juice alone indicate that it is not suitable for syrup.

CAREER OF THRILLS

LONDON, Sept. 3 By Mail —The type of men that are becoming national heroes in England's greatest war is exemplified today in the story of the adventurous career of Midshipman George L. Drewry of London, who has been decorated with the Victoria Cross for valor at the Dardanelles.

Not yet of age, Drewry's brief 20 years have been packed with thrills that rival the most romantic heroes of Marryat's tales of the sea. He has sailed the world around, had thrilling rescues from watery graves and has been shipwrecked on a desert isle, but no finer story of heroism has been told during the war than his conduct while disembarking troops from the steamship River Clyde off Gallipoli peninsula.

The young midshipman was placed in charge of a flatboat at 5 a. m. on the memorable day of the landing of against the Turks. From the side of the River Clyde the vessel, which was later run ashore to facilitate the landing of soldiers from a hole cut out in its plates, he steered straight toward Cape Helles in the face of a furious fire, to beach his craft where, with others, it would act as a landing stage for the soldiers. Behind him came the River Clyde. As the transport crunched its bow on the sandy shore, Drewry's lighter hit the beach at her port bow. Jumping ashore with a hawser, he secured the small craft and went to the aid of Captain Unwin, who by this time had jumped into the water in an effort to place another lighter. Both, despite machine gun and shrapnel, escaped death by inches but were unable at once to accomplish their task. Drewry leaped aboard a lighter and then into the water again to assist a wounded soldier. He then threw away his revolver, coat and hat and went back to the aid of the captain. Shortly afterward a bit of shrapnel struck the youth on the head, knocking him down. He was carried aboard the River Clyde, his wound dressed, and he immediately rushed back to the aid of Captain Unwin. With a rope in his teeth he swam to other lighters and fastened them to the grounded craft. Twice he executed this feat under sniping fire until rescued, completely exhausted.

The story of Drewry's gallantry at the Dardanelle drew the story of his other adventures from his father and mother in London today. He left school at the age of 16, joined the mercantile marine and was apprenticed aboard the Indian Empire, a large London sailing ship. An incident of his first year at sea was a fall from a high mast into the sea. He was rescued with difficulty. This incident was nothing compared to the adventure which befell him later.

While sailing around Cape Horn in the Indian Empire, a storm arose and the vessel was wrecked on a desert island. A heavy sea literally washed the crew into a shallow bay, which was filled with seaweed. Swimming and crawling over the vegetable mass, the crew succeeded in reaching shore. For fourteen days they sustained existence on edible roots and shell fish and managed to hold out until rescued by a Chilean man-of-war.

After this, in 1912, the youthful adventurer returned to England and was given an officer's birth on a merchant liner. Since then he has traveled all over the world, and happened to be in Port Said in July, 1913, when he joined the Royal Navy reserve as a midshipman. In August, 1914, he was appointed to H. M. S. Egmont, guardship at Malta, and later to the torpedo gunboat Hussar. Afterwards he was transferred to the transport River Clyde. He will be 21 years of age in November.

SAUGUS INSTEAD OF SURREY

The postoffice department has ordered the name of the postoffice at Surrey to be changed to Saugus. For many years the well-known railroad junction of Saugus, beyond the Newhall tunnel, has been afflicted with two names, one given by the railway and the other by the postoffice people. Recently Congressman Randall recommended that the name of the postoffice be changed to correspond with that of the railway station, so that now it is Saugus hereafter.

The Interstate Commerce Commission's cut in anthracite rates is pretty bituminous for the coal man.

LIMA BEANS SHORT

Reports from Oxnard, Cal., are that the lima bean crop this year will be much smaller than that of last year, says the Pacific Fruit World. The acreage planted is as large, or larger than previous years, but the indications are for a lighter crop. This condition, and the fact that most of the holdover crop has been sold, that remaining being in the hands of the ranchers who are financially strong and independent, is forcing the price up. Three weeks ago beans were selling at $4.05; this week the quotation is $4.15.

The rose beetle, or flores rose bug, is a new pest that has just been discovered as a menace to the bean crop in the Santa Paula and other sections of the county. While new in the bean fields, as an enemy to the citrus district it is familiar. The beetle climbs into the bean vine and devours the leaves. While it has been found at work in a number of fields, no appreciable harm has been done thus far.

TROPICO

Mr. James Stanton of West Park avenue celebrated his seventy-fifth birthday anniversary Sunday, Sept. 12, by inviting several friends to his home and treating them to a dinner that, we are certain, was never excelled in Tropico.

His sister, Miss Stanton, is the presiding genius of his home, and makes it all that could be desired by looking after his comforts and pleasures as he journeys toward the "sundown sea," and on this occasion she aided in making the day one to be remembered through all time by all who were privileged to be present.

The rooms of their neat bungalow were beautified with flowers and the dining table was centered with a low cut vase filled with ferns and pink roses. Covers were laid for nine who gathered around the board with light hearts, and for an hour indulged in pleasant chat and partook of the many delicacies lavishly proffered by host and hostess. A birthday cake, beautifully decorated, was presented by Mrs. Reynolds of Glendale, and was one of the features of the feast, for it was destined to be cut and served by Mr. Stanton, the recipient, who looked at it long before he could make up his mind to destroy the beauty of the decorations and lettering.

After the repast the afternoon was passed in social chat, and the discussion of the various topics now before the world.

Mr. and Miss Stanton are of Quaker origin, and were reared in that sect, so it was of great pleasure to them to greet an automobile load of "Friends" who drove over from Pasadena about 4 o'clock to extend birthday greetings to Mr. Stanton and renew the friendships formed on the Atlantic shores.

The guests who were honored by Mr. and Miss Stanton were: Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Reynolds of Glendale, Mr. and Mrs. James W. Tuppan of Tropico, Mrs. Elliot and son of Glendale, and Mrs. M. C. K. Shuey of Tropico, who, as they bade adieu to their host and hostess, wished that many happy years might still be added to those already past before being called to pass over the "great divide."

A number of Tropico's pioneer citizens plan to attend the Old Settlers picnic to be given at Echo park on Saturday, Sept. 18. These annual events are always hailed with much pleasure by the pioneers of not only Tropico, but the surrounding territory. For one happy day they live over in memories that are dear the days of long ago.

Master Vernon Maxson of Long Beach is enjoying the week as the guest of his little friend, Master Eustace Benton Moore, of Blanche avenue.

The committee of the Tropico municipal playgrounds is arranging to give a dance at K. P. hall on South San Fernando boulevard Saturday evening, for the benefit of the playground fund and for the local ball team. A general admission of 50 cents per couple, with 10 cents for each extra lady, will be charged. Refreshments will be served. The committee promises an excellent three-piece orchestra and all of the latest dances will be given.

It was here that they saw a number of friends and fellow-students from the Glendale High school, Donald Cowlin, Chancellor Livingston, Ben Durham and Hill McGillis. Although they liked San Francisco very well, Mr. Dyer and Mr. Scheuner are glad to be here once more and able to attend to their duties at Glendale High school, where Mr. Dyer is the speaker of the student body and Mr. Scheuner the vice-president of the sophomore class.

R. A. Walton is having several wells sunk on Honolulu avenue near Dunsmoore avenue. Water is being found 17 feet below the surface, which is an excellent indication of a large supply being present.

Saturday's Ball Game

That old lady, Opportunity, knocked at the door for Burbank in the eighth inning of last Saturday's ball game and all the family happened to be in at the time. When Bidwell, with one out, opened the door and walked to first on a pass by Mr. Young, who only brought along his glove and a request to have pity on his youth, as assets for box work, we could not tell that this was the lady's name. The hunch had gone forth that her name was Miss Fortune, as Alumni up to this time was three marks to the good on the official records. After Elliot and Defty had secured free transportation behind Bidwell, Mr. Young was relegated to extreme field, where it was thought that he could do no more damage.

I'm betting he was sure the lady's name was Misfortune about this time. Both Elliot and Defty only had a bowing acquaintance with the dame we read so much about, so outsiders could not be sure that she "had arrove even yet," but Gabbage, next recruit, had met her before, as he had walked to first twice in the "house of meetin'," and his walk forced in one man, which left the score only two to go to play even.

McDonald cracked a "whang-doodle" of a sacrifice fly too far out to be relayed in time, and there was no further guessing about it—the team knew the lady, and was bound to give her a "warm reception." After Leach hit safe and two "put-outs" eventually happened, we figured up one tally to the "jimpson." Besides a little lift for the Burbank team and discouraged systems for the Alumni, who came back with two runs in the ninth before our "flinger" could get over the after-effects, Burbank came right back with five hits, which were sure good for the two necessary runs that were garnered. A remark by an Alumni player made before the game didn't seem to carry the punch at the end of the game. He had said: "Burbank never seemed to win anything when I was out here."

SORGHUM FOR FEED

The grain sorghum specialists in the United States department of agriculture have found that the feeding value of these sorghums is within 10 per cent of that of corn. If the price of the sorghum grains, therefore, is less than 90 per cent of the price of corn, it is profitable to feed them. In a large portion of the country the price for sorghum grain is usually much less than this and the grain sorghums should, therefore, be used far more than at present as a feed for livestock.

Chemical analysis of sorghum grains compared with dent corn show that the sorghums are distinctly higher in protein content than corn. The carbohydrate content is practically the same. On the other hand, the fat content is much lower than in corn and the fiber content is also somewhat less. The sorghums are eaten readily by stock and poultry of all kinds. Moldy heads or musty and weevily grain will not be relished any more than corn, oats or barley in the same condition. Since the kernels are hard, it is desirable to grind or chop them before feeding.

Another use to which sorghum grains can be profitably put is in the feeding of poultry. At the present time it is probably safe to say that some form of grain sorghum seed constitutes fully 25 per cent of the prepared poultry feed sold in this country, and it is probable that the proportion would be still larger if a supply were always available at satisfactory prices. As the poultry industry is steadily increasing, it seems probable that this outlet for the sorghums will be even greater in the future than it is now.

STORIES OF THE WAR

How the news of the big war penetrated to the Arctic circle and rooted out an Englishman who has just now returned to fight was told in London recently.

Henry James, a subaltern, was 200 miles north of Edmonton when one day an Indian passed his camp and volunteered the information that a big war was on.

"That's all right," James answered. "Mexico and the United States are at it."

The Indian, however, insisted that it was a bigger fight.

James later struck camp and journeyed to the nearest trading post, where he learned that England had been at war for months. He immediately returned to Canada and sailed for England.

A soldier correspondent writing from the firing line in Northern France tells how a Canadian officer escaped from the enemy in his "altogether."

"I was returning from a deserted village near ———," he writes, "when to my astonishment I saw, leisurely strolling along ahead, a man entirely naked.

"We exchanged greetings and he told his story. He had been captured by the Germans, stripped of his clothing and placed under guard. Eluding his guards, he had regained our lines. I loaned him my waterproof and gave him a cigar that he asked for, and he coolly continued his journey. I have since had the waterproof returned with a letter of thanks. He was a high Canadian officer.

SPECIAL EXTRA! FARMERS FROM MIDDLE WEST

On Oct. 14 the special farmers' train of Pullmans will leave Chicago for San Francisco, via the Santa Fe. It will stop two days at San Diego, three at Los Angeles, and as long as it likes in San Francisco. Shorter stops will be made at various points in Southern California and the San Joaquin Valley, where special reception committees will provide automobile tours for the passengers.
